THE LEGAL TENDER QUESTION-OPIN-ION OF JUDGE ROBERTSON.

H. A. Griswold, Appellant, Appeal from H. P. Hepburnet al., Appellecs.) Chan. Conrt. The court being sufficiently advised, delivered the following opinion herein, to-wit:

bearing on the consistency, stability, and prac-cical supremacy of the Federal Constitution, our only fear is, that we may not be able to otherst our judicial minds of all extraneous ine

The political mechanism of the United States is a simple dualism consisting of separate State governments for all local concerns, and a common government for all instinational affairs.

The Constitution of the United States deduces the spheres of each of these forms of government; and, in it, the people of the States, who, as pre-existing sovereignites, made it, reserved to themselves all powers not transferred by it, and declared that, in the nitimate sense, it shall be the supreme law of the land. As thus defined, each State government possesses the inherent sovereignity of its local constituency, modified by the delegation of all pushors ip ower unless it shall be clearly satisfied that they are now.

Wherever a jurkst inquires whether a State estatute is consistent with the State Constitution, he looks into that Constitution, not for a grant, but only for a sme limitation of the power inherent in the people's legislative organ so far as not forbidden by their organic law.

But, as Congress derives its power from grants by the people of pre-existing State sovereignities, an enlightened linguier into the constitutionality of any of its acts books only for a delegation of power by the Federal Constitution, for that Constitution expressly declares that all power not delegated by it is reserved to the States or to the people. In this class of cases, therefore, he who asserts the power holds the affirmative, and unless he "maintains it," the controverted act abould not be enforced as law by the judiciary. The debates in the convention echo that scatiment, and its off-pring was coined money as established by the constitution. The Articles of Confectation gave to its Congress jower "to echo money and emit bits of credit,". The same power was transcribed into a draft of the present constitution. But, on the motion of Governor Morris, the power to 'emit hills of credit' was stricken ont by a large unjority, and the power "to coin money" was left, as it now stands, alone. The following extracts from the debate on that motion will show the motive for that decision. Mr Morris said that "if the United States had credit, such bills would be unnecessary; if they had not, unjust and unseless." Mr Madison, afterward 'resident of the United States, said, "Will it not be sufficient to prohibit the making them a tender? This will remove the temptation to entit them with unjust views; and promissory notes, in that shape, may, in some emergencies, be best,"

Mr Gorbam said he was "for striking ont, without any provision, if the words stand they may lead to the measure."

Mr Mason, expressing doubts and unwillingness "to tie the heands of Congress," said: "Congress [be thought] would not have the power unless it were expressed."

Mr Gorbam again said: "The power [of emitting hills] so far as it will be necessary or safe, is involved in that of borrowing money"—that is, to issue Government notes, but not to force their circulation by declaring them money nor making them a legal tender.

Mr. Elisworth (afterward Chief Justice of the United States) said he "thought this a favorable moment to shut and bar the door against

Mr. Langdon declared that he would rather reject the whole plan than retain the three words, "and emit bills"
On the sentiment, and for the purposes thus indicated, the proposed power to emit bills of credit was repudiated by the vote of nine States, against the vote of New Jersey and Marvland the quoted prohibitions on their own power, and why grant the specific power only? If they intended that Congress should have any more power over money why did they not make the grant more comprehensive? money.

Without the constitutional prohibition the States might make anything else a tender as well as money, and thereby defeat the only purpose of giving to Congress the exclusive power to coin money alone. It was therefore nunecessary to confer on Congress power to make such money a tender—and it would have been inconsistent with the great popular purpose of the only power over money to give to Congress the cormorant power to make bills of credit on any paper efficies a legal tender.

As some confirmation of our opinion on this

As some confirmation of our opinion on this subject, we presume to quote a concurrent spinion of an illustrions jurist who, if not, as often styled, the defender of the Constitution, as unquestionably among its most enlightened nterpreters and consistent champions.

perhaps one, intended or desired that Congress should have power to enforce such a circulation by declaring paper of any sort money or making it a legal tender.

Banks, both national and local, may be constitutions!. No power could be more conclusively settled by reason, authority, and time, than that of establishing a National Bink. And, although no State has authority to "emit Bills of Credit"—defined in Craig vs. Missontto be bills issued by a State on its own credit, for the purpose of circulating as money, yet any State may incorporate natural persons for banking purposes; tor, as the only object of such a Charter is to impart legal individuality. banking purposes; for, as the only object of such a charter is to impart legal individuality to a multitude of natural persons, and limit their inherent right to loon their own money and issue their own notes, therefore the corpo-ration does not devise, from its charter, the power to lend money and discount hills. And the hank notes are not interdicted "Bills of Gredit," consequently such notes, though

Was the credit of the Government, with all termunfold and immense resources, so low or shiking so fast as to require the prop of the header act? No and truth echoes, everywhere, no. Was unlimited taxation a barren or an anavailable power? And might not a judicious resort to that resource, aided by other ample means, have secured the credit of the Government, and more certainly than the tender act, have upheld its treasury note? And would not such a draft on the property of the people in proportion to their means have been far more equally distributive of the common burthen than that which was imposed chiefly on one class?

With the full benefit of the tender scraw. With the full benefit of the tenuer scrow, freesery notes sank below the alarmlar mark of more than two for one, and the heavy loss eli, not on the Government only, but also on he laboring classes, and peculiarly and unqually on the creditor class. Had Congress, equally on the creditor class. Had Ongress, in stend oi trying the tender expedient, the constitutional availability of which was generally detrinsted, properly increased the taxes and piedged the public revenue and lands in the security of which all would have troused. Treasony notes would have been much more accredited. Or had it made those notes, like the five twenty" bonds, draw a moderate increst, this atone, without increased taxation or occurive tender, would have prevented their depreciation to so low an eth as that to which, with the truder prop. they were deemed to fail. This is well libratrated by the historic fact that interest, bearing bonds, which were never made a tender, always stood higher than the tender tota. But, had angmented taxation and preme in war as in peace, and as much so over oldiers as citizenc—over armies as Legislatures. I this be not true, the powers of war may be-ome employonas.

This power is claimed as incidental to some one or all of the express powers—to declare war, to regulate commerce, and to borrow money.

If this be not true, the powers of war may become emilyorons.

In times of popular effervence or the turbulence of war in any of its forms, and especially in that civil strife, the liberty and security guarantied by the Constitution are in much more danger than in the tranquil season of peaceful copee; and the practical supremacy of intdamental principles is far more needful when tomultinous passions agitate the popular mind than when its calm reason rules. And, therefore, the Constitution was made more for string than quiet times, and should, as certainly and constantly, operate supremely. The Government, through its Congress or its army, has no more right in war than in peace to take riviste property without just compensation, which can be measured only by proof, to decide on which is a judicial function wisely with held from the Legislative Department, and the need in which is a junction wisely with-beld from the Legislative Department, and the secumption of which by it would make this herished guaranty a mockery and frustrate is conservative alm.

any other kind of money than gold and silver, or force anything else as a tender for money, no such attempts would be legalized by war. But was created the necessity and furnished the occasion for the exercise of the power to borrow money, which was iawfully done in the mode of issuing Treasnry notes. And, consequently, if there was implied power to declare those notes money and make them a legal tender for money due on private contract, it must be incident to the borrowing power, and to no other express power. And if these Treasnry notes be money to issue "money to berrow money" would be a strange solecism. But we can scarcely see that such an enactment was, in the constitutional sense, a "increasary" mean to the end of borrowing, for it does not certainly appear to have essentially facilitated that object, crippled as it was by the act which employed it as a mean—and it is quite evident that if abstractly it might have had some such effect, it was more than neutralized, even to the great as a meast—said it is quite evident that it abstractly it might have had some such effect, it was more than nentralized, even to the great depression of the notes by the provision in the same act which, instead of requiring duties on imports to be paid on those notes, exacted gold and silver. But, however this may be, we cannot doubt that the expedient resorted to was not, in the constitutional sense, a "proper" mean. And this is already demonstrated nulsess we are mistaken in the foregoing principles and fillustrations of the Constitution bearing on the term "proper," or in the conclusion that the provisions, spirit, and history of the Constitution forbid anything but gold and silvers as money or as a tender on contracts for money. And, if we are right, as we feel well assured we are, no one can pretend that the power assumed is or could be implied because it is an axiomalic truth, that nothing ineansistent with the Constitution can be implied as how legislation can destroy or Impair the obligation of a contract otherwise than by operating on the remedy. Any legislative act that takes away all remedy destroys the obligation; and any such act as limpairs the remedy thereby impairs the obligation. Right and remedy are different things; and consequently no restroactive change in the remedy existing under the lexicoist the date of a contract would impair its chiligation unless the substituted or modified remedy is less stringent, available, and effectual; lint any change that makes the remedy less efficacious to that extent unquestionably impairs it. ow legislation can destroy or lm efficacious to that extent nuquestionnoly impairs it.

The law under the sauction and faith of which a contract is made and to be performed, defines its obligation. And, therefore, any legi-lative act that makes the right less valuable and available so far impairs the obligad in of the centract. The contract in this case bound the debtor to pay the creditor a certain sum in money. The law of Kentucky, where the contract was made and to be performed, entitled the creditor to remedy to enforce the payment in money of the stipulated amount. And, of course, any legislation requiring him to take the creditor to remedy to enforce the payment in money of the sipulated amount. And, of course, any legislation requiring him to take anything clse or of less value would impair the legal obligation of his contract. Treasmy notes are not money. Nor are $100 of such paper equivation to the same in money. To the extent of the difference the two things are not commensurable in either kind or value; and, to the same extent, the creditor, if not permitted to recover his debt on money or if e-mpelled to take less than its value, is legislated out of it. The tender act of Congress, therefore, if enforced, impairs the obligation of the contract. But the appellee insists that Congress had a constitutional right than to impair. And, in support of that assumption his counsel argued that as the provision in the Constitution prohibiting all State legislation impairing the obligation of contracts does not apply to or restrain Congress this pretermission impairing the obligation of that power to Congress. This presents an unsettled, difficult, and very important problem for indical solution. On full consideration our conclusion is that Congress neither had, nor consistently or safely could have, any such power except so far as it has been granted in the express power to establish a uniform astem of bankrupt laws.

For the harmony of the Union and the conal-

In that case the Supreme Court decided only that the night a State had a general right to tax all I reperts within its local juris ledon, set it could not tax the Bank of the United States, because that institution had been constructionally established by Congress, and there could be no subgroubite power in a State to destroy it, as might be done by Indefinite taxation. But in the case the question is one of power in Congress to make treasury notes a tender, and in deciding whether there was implied power to make it can be deer. Its inconsistence with the tens I without his first tenses and intentionally withheld

Then, having defined implied power, and from Congress is not only admissible but trem Congress is not only armissione but of clusive to sh w that such a mean is not pro and that, therefore, there could be no such plied power. The power to establish the bluss frem anjudged as implied, and it not could have been decided to be constitutively be the state of the country of could have been decided to be constitution had it been deemed inconsistent with the Costinuin or with State rights, which won have negatived the implication. And that is turn that the constitution in this case. Had the Tender act, if the Bank Charter, been adjudged constitution and then, had a State attempted to resist it tender because it interfered with its own power contracts, the case cited would have be sandagonal in principle. But the two cases at in fact antipodal in principle and the cited of does not tonch the case in hand. Without the there elaboration, we are content with the costiclien that the following conclusions are incitable:

ital le:

1st. The people, in adopting their Nation
Constitution, with signal emphasia and impresive forethought, established gold and silvedinas the money, and the only legal money, the Unital States.

2d To seeme their well-considered objections bey determined that no legislation. State or na or al, should ever make anything else a lega tender for money, demandable on any contra made between citizens under the sanction tender for money, demandable on any contract made between citizens under the sanction of the State laws.

3d. That they experimentally understood the radical difference between constitutional money and a mere paper "currency," and intended that no such mere currency should ever supplant the nee or shake the stability of gold and silver as the trne standard of value for money and for property.

The necessary corollary is, that all power not expressly delegated over money is constructively forbidden. And, if this be true, there can be no implied power to make Treasury notes a legal tender in private contracts. And this nitmate conceinsion is illustrated by the significant fact that, for more than seventy years succeeding the inanguration of the Union, Congress, in no financial pressure or viclestude of fortune, ever, until February, 1862, attempted to make Treasury notes or any other paper credit a tender for individual debt. To declare what shall be money and what a legal tender is a substantive power fully executed by the Constitution itself, and not left to ordinary legislation, and, even otherwise, could not be impiled as "recessary and proper" means subservient to the end of the express powers.

For the foregoing reasons we not only see no plansible ground for the constitutional fundation of no much of the act of February, 1862, as declares United States Treasury notes to be money, and legal tender in payment of debts on private couract; but we thisk that it is destined of any such support and is clearly unconstitutional, and therefore should not be enforced as law.

When the loss of insulation became known on board the Great Eastern, it is supposed that those in charge of the operations would order the ship to be but back, in order to underrun in the Landon Times, a brisk wind or any routhness of the sea would compet the telegraph people to cut the cable at once and grain people to cut the cable at once and bnow it.

The report brought by the First Fruit is not absolutely inconsistent with the supposition is supported by the lact that while it was in lat. 51, long 38, the insulation first began to give cont, and the Great Fastern probably wentsome distance after thia. It was in lat. 570 10°, long, to, one degree nearer Valentia than the First Finit fourd the bnow. As so the possibility of recevering the cable, should it have been bnowed as suggested, opinions differ.

The London Daily News mentions, as an encouraging omen, the fact that a cable now worked was sheld out of 1600 fathoms of water noder less favorable chrounstances. Should the worst anticipations be realized, and the cable fund to have parted, only about 500 miles of wire will be lost, as from 400 to 500 miles can be recovered from the Valentia end.

We occasionally see articles in our exdesigned to persuade persons from quitting the country and going to Brazil, Better help them along. By all means let such people go. It will be a good riddance. We icel such contempt for the individual who thinks he can't endure the Government of this ntry that we should be gratified if he would take himself off and the sooner the better. He can't go too quick. Such people are altogether the world. too sensitive to live in the United States. Their dess of liberty are too refined and delicate to stay here under the "military despotism" that prevails. Let them seek the elevated society and the free institutions of Brazil. There charm them. They will there realize their pet scheme of a Southern Empire already cut and dried to their hands. What a glorious chance there is for them to emigrate! Will they please go? Perhaps some Empire, become dukes, nobles, &c., and aspire even to take their places around the council board of royalty in company with mulatto gentlemen and other distinguished personages. This will be sad news, perhaps, to our emigrants. Let them not be discouraged, however. They may yet be as potent in promoting abolition in that ntry as they have been in this. A Paris paper thinks the propositions in some shape wil paes, and calls upon Don Pedro to give them a helping hand. According to one of them, al egrees enrolled in the army and navy shali be free at once, all concubines also; that slaves shall not be bequeathed by will, that in ten years all slaves of twenty-five years of age shall e free, and, finally, that in fifteen years all plegers shall be as good as white, brown, yellow, or variegated folks, to be free and onal, men and brothers, women and sieters.

Furthermore and moreover, we have a suspicion that there has never been any intentiou f coing there on the part of any of the high secreb, that they have talked about it merely to get their names into the papers and to be persuaded not to go! Spoiled children sometimes cont and declare their intention to do certain hings-which they have no ides and no wish of doing-just to have the pleasure of being coaxed not to do it. Still the hant noblesse of the chivalry should go for their own good—and that of the country. Their departure would be an event worth chronicling, the hegirs of hegi-ras. We urge them, pray them, beg them, besech them with all our bowels of compassion and all our regard for the eacred honor of the hivalry, to go. Will they go? How can they help it? No we cidn't We went to Richmond upon a pase from the Commander of the Army and Navy of the United States and the Secretary of War of the Confederate States. We no more forfeited our right to vote than we should have done by crossing the lines with a flag of trace.

You went to Richmond to give aid and comfort to a rebel in arms against the United States; and there are no provised in the law of this State agreeing that, on certain terms and conditions, aid and comfort might be given.

We gave to that rebel (an only soon) no aid.

We gave to that rebel (an only son) no aid or comfort in any matter connected with the re-bellion, and therefore we violated the spirit of no law either of the United States or of Kentucky. We aided and comforted him no more, as a rebel, by trying to serve him in a civil trial, than we should have done by praying for him. We think that the editor of the Democrat's repeated allusions to this thing are heartless and most discreditable to him both as an editor and a man. Let any of his friends say whether he was not giving aid and comfort to the rebels, giving them aid and comfort as rebels, when he publicly announced his leap from the Union

The British war steamers Terrible and Galitia, om lieart's Content on the 2d, arrived at St.

John's, N. F., at 90 Clock on the extern returned 15th. The steamship Great Eastern returned to Sheerness on the 11th. Captaia Napler re-ports as follows: The cable parted on Wednes-day, the 2d inst. in 1,950 fathoms of water. It was then grappled for three different times, and raised 1,960 inthoms respectively. The grapday, the 2d inst., in 1,950 fathons of water. It was then grappled for three different times, and raised 1,960 inthoms respectively. The grappling broke, but the cable remained unbroken. The Great Eastern returned to England for stronger and better grappling gear.

Mr. Valley, one of the electricians, writes most encouragingly regarding the cable, Its sye: We found no difficulty in grappiling the cable, even in the greatest depth of water. As soon as the proper tackie is prepared we will probably commence grappling for the cable again one hundred miles east of the break, where the water is only 1,500 fathoms deep. The buoy rides well, being fastened by pieces of condemned cable.

Mr. Field is in good health.

The Wilmington Herald of the 10th says the investigation by Generals Ames and Dancan, and Colonel Donnolan, shows that the negroes in Fayetteville. North Carolina, and vicinity, have been cruelly treated, not only by the civilians but by the civil antherities. Two negroes were tied up and publicly whipped by the Sheriff. Others were left tied till a storm prostrated the trees to which they were tied, holding them to the ground until relieved. Citizena too have presumed to exercise the authority of masters over these people, and punish them as they see fit. It is also said some of the negroes have been killed. thip was stopped, and the cable transferred to the picking up gear, which commenced hauling it in. At 1/2 P M, after picking up two and a quarter miles of cable, the lault came on board, and, on examination, proved to have been conced by a stout piece of which having been driven entitiely through the cable. The two and a quarter miles of cable were covered by a depth of one thousand time hundred fathoms of water. The operation of picking up from this depth was frequently interrupted by the want of stem. The night being very dark and foggy, the operation of lowering the spice and transferring the cable to the paying-ont machinery at the stem was postponed till the next morning. The Great Eastern was, by the able management of Captain Anderson, kept right up to the cable, and so prevented any strain beyond the cable's own weight coming on it. There is not elightest idea of a run on the banks of this city. They are all in good condition, and have the entire confidence of the community. It is understood their loss through Ketchun will be ensil, or, at all even's, will not be enough to effect the standing or security of any of the bankers. of the negroes have been killed. Troops are New York, August 17.

The following is Mr. Cyrus Field's diary:

Steamship Great Eastern, Atlaut's Ocean, North
Latitude 51 25, West Longitude 39, 6 o'clock Friday exening, August 11th, 1865.—The steamship Great Eastern asaled from the shore off Stearness on Saturday, July 16th, at 12:30, and at half-past two o'clock on Monday evening, the 17th, she overhauled the Caroline, which left London on the 5th Instant, with the shore end on board. She had been detained by ha! weather. We took her in tow, and arrived at Valentia at 6:15 on Wednesday morning. As the weather was not favorable, the Caroline went into Valentia harbor, and the Great Eustern to Blenkhaven, in Bantry Bay, followed the next day by Her Majesty's steamers, the Terrible and Subynx; the twentyseven miles of the heavy shore end were snoty of any of the bankers.

New York, Angust 17.

The Commercial says: Kelchum, Son, & Co. have made an assignment to Mr. P. S. Calhoun, President of the Fourth National Bank, and Mr. Bemont, formerly a paitner in the firm of Ketchum, Rogers, & Bement. The house and jurniture of Edward Ketchum have been seized by the shelf.

NEW YORK, Ang. 17. was more tone and firmness at the steamers, the Terrible and Sohvax; the twentyseven miles of the heavy shore end were snecessfully laid from the Caroline, towed by the steamer Hawk, on Saturday the 22d. At quarter past five o'clock the next afternoon, the splice between the main cable and the shore end was completed, and the Great Eastern, the rerible and Sphyn steamed toward Newfoundland, while the Caroline and Hawk renrined to Valentia; the fault was brought on blard and found to have been caused by a piece of Iron wire, similar to that used in the manufacture of cable, about two inches long, having be n forced between the onter and through the guttipercha into the coper wire.

The and a quaster miles of cable was recovcred, the fault cut out, and a new splice made.
The cable was then retransferred to the payingout machine at the stern, and at 4 10 A. M., on Tuesday, the 25th, all was again in perfect order and the fleet on its way to America, having been detailed 37 hours and 50 minnies At noon

Friday, August 11, 1 P. M.—We hished hauling in 2,400 fathoms of rope, when the grapple came up foul with its own chain. At 11 A. M. we began to grapple again, and, as soon as all the 2,400 fathoms were pared out, we commenced dragging till 3:53 P. again, and, as soon as all the 2,400 fathoms were payed out, we commenced dragging till 2:53 P. M., when we began to haul in slowly. It was soon evident by the general strain that the grapple had caught the cable. At 7 P. M., when 710 lathoms had been ecovered, the rope parted. As there was not sufficient rope on board the Great Eastern to resume grappling, it was decided that she return to England at once. Evansville with a good trip of people.
